How Do Learners and Educators Use the Intercultural Can-Do Statements?

Goal Setting	The Intercultural Can-Do Statements help learners show their intercultural competence in the target language . Learners use the statements to set learning goals, document their progress, and regularly self-assess and reflect on their learning.
Proficiency vs Performance	Proficiency is what one can consistently do with language in non-rehearsed, spontaneous and real-life contexts with native speakers over a sustained period of time. Performance is what one can do with language in practiced or familiar learning contexts and can serve as a bridge to proficiency.
Benchmarks	Benchmarks are long-term proficiency goals for learners. Benchmarks can be used by educators to establish course outcomes.
Performance Indicators	Indicators are steps for learners to chart their performance and their progress toward meeting long term proficiency goals. Indicators can help inform the creation of units by educators.
Examples	Examples provide evidence of real-life consistent intercultural performance in the target language over time, or can inform the creation of lessons or learning activities. This is not a checklist to complete, but rather examples that will be elaborated and built upon by individual learners or educators.
“I can...(customize)”	Customizable examples allow learners or educators to create their own samples of intercultural communication, aligned to their learning content or context and the targeted proficiency level. Novice: Identify = Recognize, name or label who or what something is. Intermediate: Compare = Identify similarities and differences to show understanding. Advanced: Explain = Apply knowledge to clarify, illustrate or describe more deeply. Superior: Analyze = Break down into its elements and examine each piece separately; give evidence to support or justify generalizations or interrelatedness. Distinguished: Evaluate = Give your verdict as to what extent a statement or findings within a piece of research are true, or to what extent you agree with them. Provide evidence taken from a wide range of sources which both agree with and contradict an argument. Come to a conclusion, basing your decision on what you judge to be the most important factors and justify how you have made your choice.

The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication and the Reflection Tool for Learners provide a set of sample tasks and scenarios that show how learners use the target language and knowledge of culture to demonstrate Intercultural Communicative Competence (ICC).

Just as the NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements for language clarify the Communication standards in the World Readiness Standards, this tool is intended to clarify and support the Cultures standards and lead learners toward developing ICC. For the purpose of this document, ICC refers to the ability to interact effectively and appropriately with people from other language and cultural backgrounds. ICC develops as the result of a process of intentional goal-setting and self-reflection around language and culture and involves attitudinal changes toward one's own and other cultures. Intercultural communicative competence is essential for establishing effective, positive relationships across cultural boundaries, required in a global society.

Cultures Goal: Interact with Cultural Competence and Understanding.

Standard: Learners use the language to investigate, explain and reflect on the relationship between Practices and Perspectives of the cultures studied.

Standard: Learners use the language to investigate, explain and reflect on the relationship between Products and Perspectives of the cultures studied.

World Readiness Standards

The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication:

- Provide samples of how learners can develop and demonstrate their ICC through the language they are learning. The extent to which one can fully understand and participate in a culture is related to the level of language proficiency.
- Are applicable to a variety of learning and life environments, such as in elementary school, an immersion class, a high school or college course, independent learning, a study abroad situation, or a work setting.
- Serve as a framework, not a curriculum, to integrate target language use and intercultural competencies in instruction, making clear the inextricable link between language and culture.
- Focus on communicative interaction in another culture, i.e., the ability to communicate and articulate in the target language and behave appropriately in the target culture.
- Support deeper learning by providing sample scenarios that show how teachers can organize activities for intercultural reflection, both inside the classroom in the target language and outside the classroom in English or the target language.

The use of the NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication can be a first step in the process to simplify the complexities of ICC and provide guidance for teachers and learners. Rather than a linear process, ICC is more iterative and interactive, like a mosaic of various cultural experiences informed by self-reflection. Each individual begins at different cognitive, cultural and linguistic stages and progresses at various rates.

What this tool IS

What this tool is NOT

Performance descriptors demonstrated consistently over time

Benchmarks: Identify overarching features of Intercultural Communication to set long term individual or course goals within each proficiency level.

Indicators: Break down broad benchmarks into manageable chunks to help learners chart progress or inform unit learning outcomes.

Examples: Break down indicators to show examples of intercultural language and behavior at each language proficiency level and suggest real-life or lesson activities.

Not a checklist of tasks to be demonstrated once and checked off

It is not sufficient for the learner to show competence in one specific situation.

Competencies are spiraled throughout the learning process so that the learner can consistently demonstrate these skills in multiple contexts.

<https://www.actfl.org/publications/guidelines-and-manuals/ncssfl-actfl-can-do-statements>

A set of learning examples that can be adapted to school or district curriculum as well as independent learning goals

The Can-Do Statements are meant to be adapted to individual learning contexts. They include open-ended “I can...” statements for learners and teachers to customize to fit the content and context of the learning and the targeted proficiency level.

Not a prescribed curriculum

The Can-Do Statements are designed to offer samples for modification or elaboration of language syllabi and curricula; they are not intended to provide ready-made intercultural lessons. The statements provided do not claim to be exhaustive or specific to a level of schooling.

One step in the process to develop the communicative aspect of ICC in a learned language

The Can-Do statements are intended to be used in conjunction with the ICC Reflection Tool. ICC also requires curiosity, discovery, interaction, self-assessment and reflection for self-examination of attitudes and values.

Not a comprehensive ICC program

The Can-Do statements are not meant to be used alone, but along with the ICC Reflection Tool. They can also be used as part of a school-wide program that includes teacher collaboration with other content areas and time for guided learner reflection on their intercultural experiences.

A starting point for self-assessment, goal-setting, and the creation of rubrics for performance-based grading

Teachers and learners use the statements for self-evaluation to become more aware of what they know and how they feel about their own and others’ cultures. By using statements aligned to the proficiency scale, it allows teachers to create rubrics that enable learners to chart their progress.

Not an instrument for determining a letter or number grade

Growth in intercultural communication is measured over time when tasks are integrated into performance assessments and evaluated using rubrics based on the ACTFL proficiency descriptors.

What is Intercultural Communication?

<https://www.actfl.org/publications/guidelines-and-manuals/ncssfl-actfl-can-do-statements>

Intercultural communication is a complex activity that combines cross-cultural knowledge and language skills. It involves initiating, understanding and responding to what is communicated, using culturally appropriate language and behavior in a given context.

For the purposes of this document, the term intercultural communication refers only to the use of culturally appropriate verbal and nonverbal skills to build relationships with people of different cultures.

Researchers such as Byram (1997, 2002), M.J. and J.M Bennett (2003), Deardorff (2006), and Fantini (2006) agreed that developing Intercultural Communicative Competence is a complex, non-linear process built from an accumulation of cultural knowledge, practices and social encounters experienced within a variety of cultural contexts. An apt metaphor is a mosaic whose total image is an assemblage of smaller, unique pieces. Each intercultural experience provides an opportunity for interpretation, discovery, interaction and reflection that motivates learners' curiosity and leads to awareness of self and others.

Because intercultural growth involves elements in the affective domain it can be a challenge, and sometimes impossible, for teachers to evaluate learners' progress. Teachers can, however, evaluate how well learners' language use demonstrates intercultural competence, given that the extent to which one can fully understand and participate in a culture is related to the level of language proficiency. The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication suggest tasks that allow for and support these opportunities for intercultural encounters.

The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication show the intersection of language proficiency and cultural competence, which do not always align. One individual may possess strong cultural competence yet demonstrate a low level of language proficiency (figure 1). Another individual may display high language proficiency but minimal cultural competence (figure 2).

The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication focuses on the extent to which learners can demonstrate their intercultural competence through verbal and non-verbal communication. These Intercultural Can-Do Statements are aligned with the Language Can-Do statements to ensure consistency with the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines. The statements are intended to depict the linguistic competency from Novice to Distinguished levels of language proficiency across the modes of communication.
