Directions:

Today you will be taking the Ohio Grade 4 Writing Achievement Test. This is a test of how well you write. Three different types of questions appear on this test: fill-in, multiple choice and response to writing prompts.

There are several important things to remember:

1. Read each question carefully. Think about what is being asked. If a graph or other diagram goes with the question, look at it carefully to help you answer the question. Then choose or write the answer that you think is best.
2. When you write your answers, write them neatly and clearly in the space provided using a pencil.
3. When you are asked to select the answer, make sure you fill in the circle next to the correct answer. Mark only one answer.

Andrew's Tree

By Patricia Toht

Andrew's tree grew in a corner of his big backyard where the muddy creek rolled with rain. Rushing water tickled the roots and lapped at the lower branches.

Some days Andrew liked to swing on the climbing rope his father had hung from a sturdy branch. He ran with flying feet and grabbed the rope just above the fourth knot. With a mighty swing, he kicked the willow's outermost leaves.

Some days Andrew liked to climb to his special reading spot. Halfway up, where one big branch split into two smaller ones, he settled in with his book.

One windy day, Andrew put on his jacket.

"Where do you think you're going?" asked his mother.

"To my tree," he answered.

“Oh no you’re not,” said his mother. “A big storm is coming. You’ll have to stay inside and find something else to do.”

Andrew sat by the window, wishing he were outside. He watched the clouds darken and lower, and the wind began to bend the trees. The wind howled. Branches scratched at the siding.

After the storm passed, Andrew and his parents surveyed the damage. In the corner of the backyard, Andrew’s tree was split. Half of its branches lay scattered on the ground. Andrew’s special reading branch was smashed beneath another, and the climbing rope was a twisted snarl.

“I’d better call the tree service to cut that willow down,” said his mother.

The next day four workers came to remove the tree. Their saws, with sharp teeth spinning, sounded like wild animals. Aargh! Roar! They chewed deep into the willow. When they were finished, only a stump remained.

“Look here Andrew,” his mother called, pointing to the stump. “See those rings inside the trunk?”

Andrew saw circles that looked like ripples on a pond.

“Nature gave your tree a golden ring for each year of its life,” she explained. “Count them. You’ll see that your tree lived a long time here by the creek.”

Andrew counted seventy-three rings, but it didn’t make him feel any better.

The next day Andrew carried a book out to the backyard. Setting it in the grass, he climbed on top of the willow stump. From there he could see a frog sunning itself in the creek. He could see a cardinal hiding in the apple tree and his mother standing at the back door. “Pretty good lookout,” he said.

Andrew climbed down and backed away from the stump, then raced toward it. Using the stump as a springboard, he rocketed through the air.

“Wow! Great launch pad!” he said.

He sat down and leaned against the stump. His back nestled into a curve between two outstretched roots. Sweet sawdust perfumed the air.

Andrew picked up his book and opened it. As he read, this new spot felt comfortable and familiar. Andrew smiled. His tree hadn't left him after all.
