Using Decodables and Leveled Text

Not if, but when?
How Should I Use Leveled Text with Beginning Readers?

• Use as a read aloud:
  • Ask about text, pictures while reading the book out loud or after the book has been read.
• Use the book to develop oral language and vocabulary
• Use for choral reading.
• Use the book to develop concepts of print:
  • top/bottom and left/right
  • capital letters and punctuation
  • cover page, title etc.
Use Decodable Readers for Independent Reading until students meet the following criteria:

1. Accurately read one-syllable real and nonsense words out of context with the following spelling patterns, without sounding them out:
   a. Short vowels, digraphs, and blends
   b. Silent e
   c. R-controlled vowels
2. Accurately read familiar 2-syllable words with short vowels, r-controlled vowels, silent e, or schwa
3. Accurately read 50 high frequency words, out of context, with spelling patterns that haven’t been taught
4. Read at least 35 words a minute in decodable text, with no more than one error
How Should I Use Decodable Text with Beginning Readers?

• Use decodable texts to give beginning readers opportunities to apply the phonics patterns being taught with connected text.
• The words in the text have been previously taught so students can successfully read the words in the passage by applying learned skills. This helps build the good habit of accurate reading.
• The opportunities to practice reading and rereading decodable texts are typically included at the end of every phonics lesson.
• Text reading practice should occur about 10-20 minutes a day depending on the age of the student.
Guiding Decodable Text Reading

1. Intentionally prepare students for text reading
2. Review words, phrases and sentences that students will read in the story.
3. Use sound-blending technique if students need practice and then encourage whole word reading.
4. Vary approaches to text reading. Promote techniques such as reading aloud with teacher, partner reading etc.
5. Conduct several readings of the same text.

Use Levelled Readers independently at the Consolidated Alphabetic Phase

Use Decodable Texts during the earlier Phases or use Levelled Text as a read aloud.
REMEMBER: The texts we choose play a major role in training the brain and developing reading habits.
“Personally, based on my own experience as a primary grade teacher, I would use all of these kinds of text.”

Dr. Tim Shanahan
Be intentional about the text you choose and when and how you and your students use it!
